APPLE HERESY IS SENSELESS

Orchardist Points Out That Oklahoma Pays $2 for Inferior Washington Fruit

A MATTER OF SENTIMENT

Home Grown Apples Are Quite as Good—Meanwhile State Yield Goes Begging

DISTANCE lends enchantment to the view," said a well-known Oklahoma orchardist this morning distinctly while discussing the disposition of Oklahoma City consumers to buy apples grown two thousand miles away, brought here at enormous expense under a "giant" promotion scheme to help out the state of Washington, and sold at a fabulous price. "Oklahoma orchardists know that all over the country there is an enormous apple crop. They know that they could not get $2 a bushel for their apples, and do not ask it. Yet Washington apples that are not 'fanciers,' are being sold at better than $2 a bushel.

"In the Ozark regions of Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri, really a part of our trade territory, there are thousands of acres of finer apples than the Washington product, awaiting a market. These can be put in the cellars of Oklahoma City householders at one-half the price being asked for the Washington product, and net the handler a fine profit; while the apples grown in this section of the state, and of splendid quality this year at least, are unable to find a staple market at a profitable price.

"If this trade at home business means anything, it should mean keeping the apple money as close home as possible, thus encouraging the Oklahoma orchardist to plant more fruit trees. Just why people will pay twice the price for a foreign article that they will for one produced right at their doors is a mystery to me."

DEATH PREVENTS TEST

Workman Who Sued R. M. Anderson for $10,000 Dies Preventing Test of New Compensation Law

The death Sunday of Samuel Truitt, the workman who fell from a scaffold at Hudson and California, September 13, somewhat simplifies the legal difficulties which he precipitated when he filed a suit for $10,000 damages against R. M. Anderson, owner of the building upon which Truitt was working.

Despite the fact that Anderson had complied with the workmen's compensation act, Truitt sued him under the old law. Had the plaintiff not died, a test case of the law would have been made whereby some inconsistencies in it might have been straightened. However, new cases will probably be filed, one by the heirs for loss to them while Truitt was incapacitated, and one by the executor of the estate, in behalf of the heirs, a widow and five children, for damages arising out of his death.

CLEAR UP TITLES

Many Washington County School Houses Build on Lands That Were Under Private Ownership

BARTLESVILLE, Oct. 25.—A considerable number of the school houses of this county are located on land to which the county has no title, according to Miss Helen M. Dunaway, county superintendent.

When the school houses were first built, immediately after statehood, the location was more or less of a haphazard affair. In many instances a site was chosen and the building erected without asking the consent of the owners of the land. In many cases the owner of the property could not be located. In other instances the owner of the land was asked if it would be all right to build a school house, and almost invariably the answer was in the affirmative. The school was constructed and is occupied, but the school district has no title to the land.

Every effort is now being made to clear up the titles, by purchase or donation of the land and, it is hoped, all will be cleared before the end of the present school year.

A Well Dressed Gentleman in All Respects, Save One

The dignified and somewhat corpulent old gentleman was no doubt ignorant of his sartorial shortcomings, since he had every reason in the world to believe that he had been perfectly attired when leaving home; so naturally he did not falter in one movement of his studied strut down Harrison street toward the uptown district this morning. Now and then he fingered a somewhat graying mustache, and occasionally blew light, almost edible puffs of rich smoke from an obviously good cigar into the frosty morning air. So on he walked, at peace with himself and the world, unaware of the fact that he was leaving behind him a line of human beings, bent almost double and acting as though some mysterious interstellar gas had suddenly stricken them with a malady characterized by uncontrollable laughter.

Finally the old gentleman reached his two hands behind his coat tails, from force of habit no doubt, and to his surprise felt something dangling from the waist of his trousers. Hastily turning around he discovered this something to be a pair of suspenders. The last pedestrians saw of him he was ducking into an improvised boudoir behind a billboard nearby.

HAND RUINED IN AMBULANCE TIP

Leland Perrine Worse Hurt of Five-Speed Regulation a Question

AS A RESULT of the overturning of a Perrine and Hahn ambulance Sunday afternoon, Leland Perrine, who was driving the car, will probably lose the use of his right hand for life. Perrine was the worst hurt of any of the five who were in the ambulance when the wreck occurred. All the back tendons of his right arm were severed.

P. J. McCarthy, who was being conveyed to a hospital after being struck by a Santa Fe train near Capitol Hill, apparently suffered no ill effects from his experience. He was severely bruised as a result of the railroad accident, but was resting easily at St. Anthony's hospital Monday morning. The others in the speeding ambulance, Walter Perrine, Ed. Roseme, and E. J. Jordan escaped with slight scratches and bruises. Physicians who operated on the driver's arm at the University hospital stated that it would not be necessary to amputate the arm, but that the hand and wrist movements would always be affected.

Cause of Accident
The spill was due to a combination of causes. Several ambulances answered the call when McCarthy was struck by the engine at the Twenty-third street south crossing. Owing to misunderstandings in the address, there was a half hour's delay in answering the call, and the Perrine and Hahn car was the first on the scene. With its five occupants, the high-powered ambulance crashed across the intersection of Robinson and Grand avenues at a terrific rate of speed. Though placed in the pavement caused the driver to swerve the heavy car in an endeavor to get by them. That threw the car to the left side of Robinson, by the Colcord building. Seeing now that a collision with the frame work that fences in part of the street in front of the new Ziegler theatre building was inevitable, the driver locked his brakes, and swerved again to the right. The car skidded for nearly a hundred feet, and then whirled over, facing south once more. It was considered a miracle that no more were hurt.

May Reduce Speed Limit
When questioned concerning the speed at which fire apparatus and ambulances were allowed to travel, Mayor Overholser admitted Monday that it was a question which had long been troubling him.

"The accident Sunday may happen again at any time," said the mayor. "Several accidents of a similar nature in Oklahoma City are already on record. According to the city ordinances, no speed or traffic regulations apply to emergency vehicles of this kind, and yet it is a question as to whether it is better to endanger the lives of many in an attempt to save a few moments time or not. If the ambulance had been traveling at a reasonable rate of speed, of course the accident would not have happened. The question of allowing emergency motor vehicles to travel through the downtown district without restrictions or regulations of any kind must come up for solving sooner or later."

ATTEND KATY TRACK MEET

Athletes From Local Railroad Offices Off to Denison, November 6

MORE than a hundred Oklahoma City employees of the M. K. and T. railroad and their families will be in Denison, Texas, November 6 to attend the first annual track meet of the Katy Lines Athletic association, a permanent organization intended to promote athletics and develop a closer relationship among the men, as well as to improve their social and physical condition and to develop a spirit of co-operation in the road's service.

More than 3,000 people, all who can possibly be spared from their duties, will be in attendance, and elaborate preparations for their entertainment have been made by the citizens of Denison. An old-fashioned barbecue will be one of the features of the day. The principal award of the meet will be the "C. E. Schaff trophy," a loving cup donated by C. E. Schaff, the receiver of the road. It will be awarded annually to the district team making the best score in the track and field events. Honor medals will also be awarded to winners of the individual contests.

The Oklahoma City men who have entered the lists have been "working out" for some time and are in the pink of condition. It is the general opinion around the local Katy depot that Oklahoma City will be a strong contender for the trophy, since several Oklahoma athletes are known to be exceptionally good in their particular lines. The entries from here are:

One hundred yard dash, R. F. Graves, Earl B. Rush; 200-yard dash, C. H. Hinman; one-mile run, C. H. Hinman; running high jump, Leo Rattiff; running broad jump, C. D. Pierce, Earl B. Rush, B. F.
